Which statement is correct about a JCA common client interface?

- A. The JCA binding component uses the JCA common client Interface APIs to communicate with the resource adapter.
- B. The resource adapter uses the common client interface APIs to communicate with the EIS.
- C. The resource adapter implements the standard MessageListener interface to poll for events from the EIS.
- D. The application server uses the common client interface APIs to commune with the EIS.

Answer: A

Explanation:

Note:

*The Common Client Interface (CCI) is the JCA-recommended client API for all resource adapters.

* A resource adapter is a system-level software driver that enables J2EE components to communicate with a back-end enterprise information system (EIS) through a JCA-compliant application server when a resource adapter for the specific EIS is deployed to the server.
