NEW QUESTION: 1

For additional processing capacity, tasks nodes can be added on demand on EMR.

Choose the correct answer:

A. True

B. False

Answer: A

Explanation:

The number of instances to use in your cluster is application dependent and should be based on both the number of resources required to store and process your data and the acceptable amount of time for your job to complete. As a general guideline, we recommend that you limit 60% of your disk space to storing the data you will be processing, leaving the rest for intermediate output.

Hence, given 3x replication on HDFS, if you were looking to process 5 TB on m1.xlarge instances, which have 1,690 GB of disk space, we recommend your cluster contains at least $(5 \text{ TB} * 3) / (1,690 \text{ GB} * .6) = 15$ m1.xlarge core nodes. You may want to increase this number if your job generates a high amount of intermediate data or has significant I/O requirements. You may also want to include additional task nodes to improve processing performance Reference: <https://aws.amazon.com/emr/faqs/>

A DevOps Engineer is building a continuous deployment pipeline for a serverless application using AWS CodePipeline and AWS CodeBuild. The source, build, and test stages have been created with the deploy stage remaining. The company wants to reduce the risk of an unsuccessful deployment by deploying to a specified subset of customers and monitoring prior to a full release to all customers.

How should the deploy stage be configured to meet these requirements?

A. Use AWS CloudFormation to publish a new version on every stack update. Then set up a CodePipeline approval action for a Developer to test and approve the new version. Finally, use a CodePipeline invoke action to update an AWS Lambda function to use the production alias

B. Use CodeBuild to use the AWS CLI to update the AWS Lambda function code, then publish a new version of the function and update the production alias to point to the new version of the function.

- C. Use AWS CloudFormation to define the serverless application and AWS CodeDeploy to deploy the AWS Lambda functions using DeploymentPreference: Canary10Percent15Minutes.
- D. Use AWS CloudFormation to publish a new version on every stack update. Use the RoutingConfig property of the AWS ::Lambda: :Alias resource to update the traffic routing during the stack update.

Answer: C
